Well, about 5 hours of work total, and the list is done! I added a few people David L. left out, relocated those he put in the wrong places and dropped some who made no entries in the log. If I came clean and took a standard SFF-allotted shift, ~~my~~ my advent would at present displace only three people. I am actually considering doing that — if I can pick my own time and am elected Librarian. At last night's meeting someone hinted at amendment to allow Marla to stay Librarian being necessary to ^{their} approval of my charter. I just don't see why her holding two jobs is so holy. While she has been presiding over meetings & c., the only librarianish duty she has performed is drawing up the shift schedule. Joe Brenner has handled cataloging and materials procurement, I have handled due dates and overdue classifications (Allan D. Newman is now a Triple Shift Taboo and doesn't know it! His books were stamped Mar 22 instead of Mar 12 (I discovered this circa Feb 15)). Me for Librarian (or if Marla wants to stay librarian, president).

I shall now present the case of my Charter versus Donna-David-and-Fred's, but first let me say that Will (who cut out early to see the TV news) and Greg (who cut out early to see the Tuesday flick with Linda) were here tonight.

ARTICLE I — No meaningful change.

ARTICLE II — My wording is a compromise between the last two wordings, and I think it is accurate.

ARTICLE III — A: Nobody "registers", I am changing this to enough attendance to show a degree of interest. As one must become a general member to become a voting member, the current voting membership is Donna, Fred, and Greg. I want to change that.

COMMENTS

ARTICLE III-B: Wording is drastically simplified as I am depriving the officers of their capability to act as an Executive Council (the officers of a club this size are a quorum, so why bother?...).
C: I am changing this so that voting status does not waver from meeting to meeting. It has been argued that my wording provides for only initial perseverance, but perhaps a rule of order forbidding those not current ^{in shift} to speak at meetings would do the trick; I regard Forum voting membership as a permanent thing once bestowed - by shift.

D: I am taking away a police power of the Librarian and its accompanying bureaucracy and substituting popular will.

E: Wording virtually equivalent.

ARTICLE IV: I am restoring the title of "President" because "Coordinators" have been referred to even by themselves as Presidents. As I am somewhat broadening the powers of the post, I am transferring the right to hold one other post to the Vice President, a post I am reviving (since you elected one, you might as well legalize him). The Treasurer remains essentially unchanged, except for no provision for a monthly statement, which he never prepares anyway. The Secretary - I am moving the minutes from the separate meeting book back to their old home, the log book. What is more important - that Donna be able to find out what went on at a meeting she was at with no trouble at all, or that anyone who misses a meeting (or anyone at all) can find out what went on by remembering which days are Mondays? The Xerox machine, when copies of minutes are required, doesn't care! I am reviving the old standing committees, breaking up the Activities Coordinator post into its logical constituents - and as said, removing the "Council".

ARTICLE V: Since you hold meetings every week, I am changing the statutory interval from ~~four~~ weeks to two.

* ANDREW JUST CAME IN! *

At the same time, I am increasing the incentive to keep them on the same day of the week.

I am, as twice stated, de-Councilizing the officers.

OLD ARTICLE VI (Incorporated into my article IV)

I am de-staggering the terms, thereby getting rid of semesters in which opposing factions could each have captured offices (look at Polity - this fall Randy Brown did the minimum possible job as Treasurer, since his cronies weren't elected).

* SHE JUST LEFT! LARRY WAS AROUND TOO! *

I am simplifying the removal process, making special impeachment meetings ~~unnecessary~~ unnecessary. And as I noted - your show-of-hands elections are unconstitutional, Stacy is still Coordinator - unless you adopt my Charter.

OLD ARTICLE VII (New Article IV) Greg objects to my wording on no real grounds. Polity demands minutes of meetings of clubs to approve allocations (PSC or line budget - Frank Jackson forged some BSU minutes); and this wording of mine is practically toothless compared to the complex system I aim to replace.

before it will release funds

OLD ARTICLE VIII: Things like this can simply be handled ad hoc.

OLD ARTICLE IX: Incorporated into article V.

OLD X/NEW VII: Pro forma.

OLD XI/NEW VII: Pro forma.

As I said, I will become shifty if elected Librarian in good faith (no prior intentions of de-shifting/gag-ruling/removing me immediately afterwards). You know I can do the job.

Why not behave like a Science Fiction Forum — and discuss works of science fiction at your meetings! It seems so tangential! ^{these days}

Why am I still here when I have a 9 o'clock class??

(NO, I did not stay through the night).

11:56: Andrea turned into a lizard and ate me.

11:57: Linda turned me into a gray mouse and ate me.

11:58: Joe Brenner turned into a Trek Calendar and turned my stomach till it burst.

11:58: Joe Rogers turned into a dragon and scorked me.

12:00: Will refused to turn into anything else and I died of revolution.

12:01: Donna frightened me to death by threatening to read me ff. Cummings's adaptation of Xenophon.

12:02: Ralph came in and bashed me to mush for being somewhat shorter than he is.

12:03: Tom came in and mashed me to pulp for being slightly taller than he is.

12:04: Marla ran me through a wringer for being slimmer than she is.

Ralph - Manned Mars Landings are kind of up in the air at the moment (Ha, Ha) 1995 $\pm$ 2 yrs seems too definite a period. Call it 2005 $\pm$ 10 and I might believe it.

A starship at 2010 (not a sterprobe) is ridiculously optimistic. There is no motivation for sending out a primitive starship - (though granted it is a vague term).

There may never be an "O'Neill" type colony. As for a ~~hydro~~ hydrogen economy before 2000, I certainly hope so.

As another ~~in~~ in my long series of energy solutions: Controlled Fusion may not be necessary. A while ago some people suggested we could detonate hydrogen bombs inside a salt dome, and run water over it to harness the heat energy. Kind of a ground based ORION project.

Linda McLaughlin -

Ralph, Considering the present administration and their attitude toward space funding, I think your predictions are way off by at least 30 years (too early). Where are you, Fred? I miss your entries.

DATE	NAME	TIME	COMMENTS

MESSAGE FROM RALPH →

~~Dear Friends;~~ TO MY CRITICS

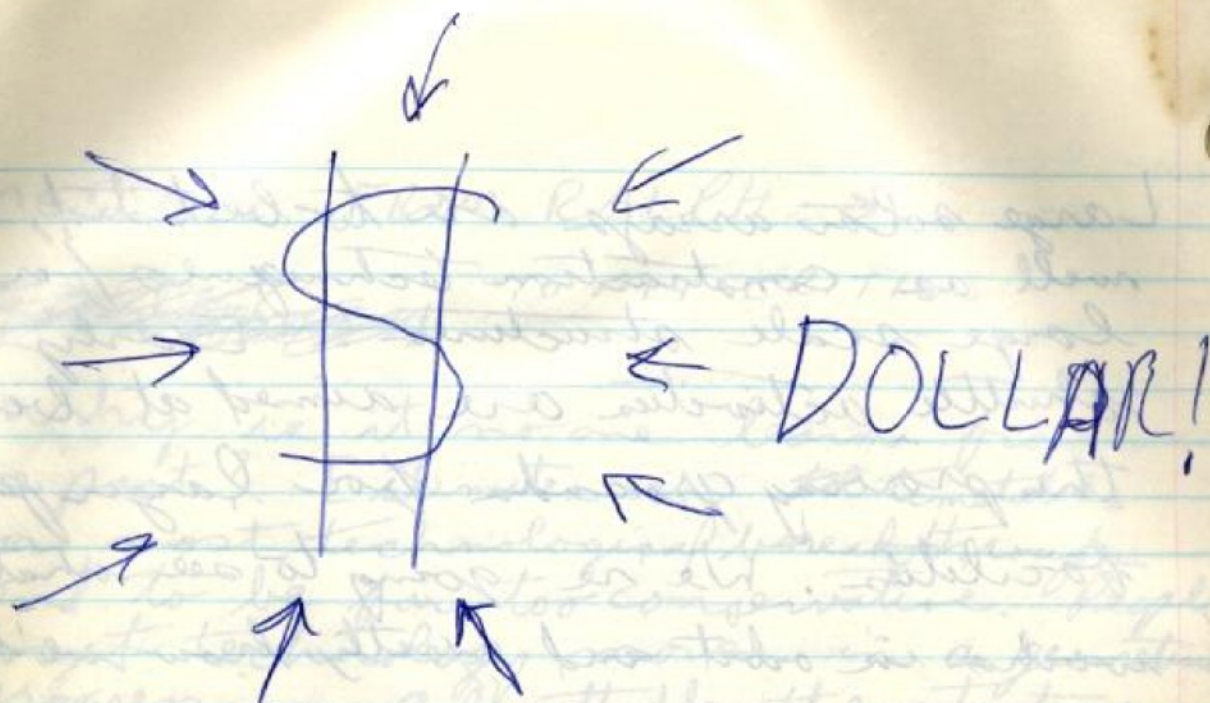

Why is it no one learns from the past? Estimates in ~~the~~ timetables for most technological breakthroughs tend to be far too conservative. People forget technology moves in a geometrical progression. Admittedly the situation of this last decade is pretty crappy but we are still pushing on, not as fast as I would ^{have} liked but ~~we~~ we are moving.

I'm a member of the AIAA a technical society for aerospace engineers. If you look at their monthly magazine Astronautics and Aeronautics you know where we are headed. Engineers tend to be pragmatists, if they're already developing the hardware we've needed for large space efforts those efforts are not far off.

The space shuttle is about to begin its operational phase. Shuttle planners are directing a large bulk of its 65,000 LB a shot payload for direct benefits. A whole spectrum of orbital manufacturing processes are to be tested, medical experiments, Earth resources operations

Large solar arrays are to be tested, as well as construction techniques for large scale structures. Early shuttle activities are aimed at being the proving grounds for larger permanent facilities. We're going to see what works in orbit and exactly how we'll take advantage of this environment. The benefits from orbit will be many. Once this early testing phase is over the next steps are inevitable. Once techniques for ^{various} ~~various~~ processes are perfected, people will realize there is something very powerful and daunting in all of this. They'll find the power to drive themselves to incredible heights. Because they ~~really~~ realize they have a chance to produce for themselves that awesome force, ^{that} ~~the~~ driving force of most people that awesome all powerful, almighty

Yes friends when some big corporation executive realizes that his high technology object can best be made in outer space, you know he'll be patting on his space suit and we'll all be on our way.

From there everything else on my timetable is inevitable, when earth orbit starts filling up with all sorts of facilities this country will be in another economic boom R + D funding will move up to what it should be and this slump we are in now will be a thing well ridden. Yes the era of apathy the time of timidity, ^{the} age of mindlessness ~~will be over, the~~ symbolised by DiscoMania will be over,

Man needs a frontier to keep him strong and vital. Space will provide that frontier. We are beginning to stagnate because there are no readily available challenging physical frontiers for us to explore. Do you really want to get some crappy job and do a 9-5 routine for the rest of your life & maybe take the wife and kids on an occasional outing on the weekend or just sit home & watch football.

Wouldn't you rather be a pioneer delving into the unknown, meeting challenges of the unknown, instead of the hellish routine of "civilized" life.

Mankind is headed for the stars, it is inevitable. And yes Louis maybe that's why I like "Star Trek" because it displayed the type of optimism I like. Mankind reaching out, exploring.

But people are still people despite the situation. No matter how advanced we get people will still do the same ~~fucked up~~ ~~stupid~~ things. In other words I'm not saying everything will be ~~stank~~ hunky dory. But we ~~so~~ should accept human nature for what it is and allow for its flaws.

Star Trek showed a future where man had learned to deal with a high technology society. The powerful figures of Kirk & Spock ~~Bob & Betty~~ always left you with a good feeling about the way we're headed, that good times are ahead.

Yes we are on the verge of a new era. ~~as~~ Man will finally shed his last concepts of geocentrism. Mankind will reach out into the infinity of space in search of his ultimate destiny.

Kurt

Great entry Ralph !!! Live Long + Prosper and I'll see you in orbit someday. The first starship should be manned ^(and womaned) by the Forum. (I'll be Capt Kurt) Donna: Just because I'm a five towns it doesn't mean that I'm obviously rich, ~~we~~ wear sassoon pants and like disco. (if that's what you were thinking) There are a few ~~decent~~ people who live in the 5 Towns. As for my sisters ... well, uh... they're just like sisters. If you ever had any sisters you would know what I mean. I don't think that my parents would mind at all if you lived with us. Ever since my brother and I have moved out they've ^{been} complaining that it's too quiet. My mother says that she doesn't have anyone to cook for anymore (she's a great cook!) I'll ask them this weekend when I see them (it's their 25th anniversary!) Why might you be in Japan? As for my poetry, eventually I'll write something better, but I think I'll have to know you more than I know you now.

DATE	NAME	TIME	COMMENTS
3/15/79	Donna Epstein	7:30	Kurt — what are the 5 towns? (As opposed to the 3 villages, 2 Hills, 3 Ringwraiths, etc.) Ralph — You hereby win the Epstein Starry Eyes Prize for March. While I share your goals to a great extent, I fear that your DONNA JUST FLASHED IN & OUT expectations are simply pie-in-the-sky. The stuff going up on the Shuttles is primitive, and can only lead to what you desire years after you figured on it. Large Scale Space Station — well, the Russians might make your date, the U.S. sure won't. If expectations are always conservative, how come NASA predicted in November 1970 that the (then planned to be larger) Shuttle would be ready in early 1975, concurrent with a 12-man space station?

And post-Shuttle vehicles (Heavy Lift, etc) are going to be on the drawing boards for years. The Shuttle program is scheduled to end in 1992, and the last ship won't be ready until 1984 (currently sched. 12/83, but slippage of the date must be allowed for). No way a moon re-visit by the U.S. in the late '80s, and the U.S.S.R. will probably continue to send robots.

A Mars sample return mission (unmanned) is not possible (without a drastic philosophy change) ~~but~~ to reach the Red Planet ere '92, and a manned followup won't be as fast as you say it is unless the sampler brings back gold or jewels. If there is a permanent lunar colony by then, it will be about the size of this library without the ambience.

The Large Space Telescope is 5 years off, the NASA budget has declined in purchasing power for 15 straight years, astronauts are unknown to the common person—you're talking about reversing a lot. Benefits & private ventures will continue to increase in space, but lasting plans to build Enzmann ships, O'Neill colonies, & the like will not be irreversibly started in this century, I fear. Not only corporate but public interest must be aroused. Politicians who think space is a waste (cf. Proxmire) (do you know that he is Joe McCarthy's direct successor?) will still be popular for a generation. And UN loonies will try and make sure that every pip-squeak nation has an equal share in space just for existing, and the nations that do the work will get irate about that, and... Mind you, I am not in favor of this, but I'm afraid it will happen.

Hydrogen combustion is scarcely mentioned nowadays, there is no way that it will power the world in 20 years. Fusion, I agree, is coming faster than most people think it is. Bravo Shiva Nova!!

Technology does move exponentially, but where it forces social change it encounters resistance. And as I have said, stupidity has a hell of a lot of inertia.

Star Trek cwince when you say that!! - a piece of half-witted smarm (I better be far away when you read this!) that should be consigned to a really slimy rubbish heap. It is aimed at the masses and glosses over with pseudo-profundities what its lovers pretend it understands. It seeks to spread silly ideas that are too well spread already. Why should all Federation races be presumed equal? If Homo sapiens encounters a superior race that doesn't want to be bothered with, or an inferior race that it shouldn't bother with (but will probably commercialize), why should it join with it in one vast, platitudinous exchanging welfare state? Why are all the people on Star Trek Mom-and-apple-pie saints? Why do the races they encounter always wind up agreeing with them or feeding away? Why, if they are going "Where no man has gone before", is almost every planet they meet recorded in their reference books? Why isn't such trash shredded at its moment of inception?

I'd better run! Help! Mad Trekkie on the loose!!

I have just bestowed another Shit Tabooship, and the List of Feces is running out of space. If elected Librarian on passage of my new charter I will actually go around to Shit Taboos and offer them redemption. Another item which has come to my attention (as co-de facto Librarian with Joe Brenner, I look through the card catalog regularly) is that Will checked himself out a book, after he was already a Shit Taboo, and stamped it with a due date of April 1, 1981. I discovered this a few days ^{at night} after the fact and altered the time on the card to the correct date, April 3, 1979; if Will does not return it by then I shall consider him a Quintuple Shit Taboo. Now, nowhere in the rules does it say that they do not apply to librarians. Will in fact owes $90 (90¢ after midnight) though Marla in practice waives the fines. Now, if elected Librarian (i.e., Library Committee Chair) I will not summarily remove Will from his shift — my new Charter takes that power away from the Librarian. But I will continue to keep a close eye on things so that such does not happen in the future. As I have said, Joe and I have been acting as Librarian (I even updated the shift schedule yesterday because Marla forgot to add Ralph's name), and (though there are no hard feelings involved in this) there is no reason ~~for~~ Marla should continue to hold the title. She would be on the Library Committee ex-officio, and if elected I would surely appoint Joe B. and someone else of moderate placidity. Last night Scott Finley was down to investigate why I had been ^{being} semi-tolerable lately. Well, it's not just electioneering. I have no intention of cranking & squalling if (IF? when is most likely the word) I lose the Librarian race. See you Monday — vote for the Charter, if not for me, so long.

OK, well...

WARNING TO LOUIS
FROM RALPH

Tobias Owen's lecture on the Voyager results was excellent. For me however it was marred by one personal note. While ^{I was} questioning Prof. Owen after the lecture, Louis attempted to provoke a squabble over my predictions, in an obviously juvenile attempt to try embarrassing me in front of Owen. This was made especially bad ~~when~~ ^{since} Owen expressed the need for student helpers. When I expressed interest Louis made cracks like "you don't want him, he's just a 'Star Trek' fanatic," and other comments obviously projected in a demeaning fashion.

Not that anyone would put much credence in anything Louis said but the situation was highly annoying and it's his intent that was intolerable. It was not the time nor place to make such remarks & such debate should also be left to less important times. Yes Louis, it is not that you had any real effect, it's the lowly miserable intentions behind what you did, it's the ~~thought~~ thought that counts.

trying to get some laughs out of the ludicrous sides of his nature. Actually, some people from SC's Starbase Suffolk (which despite its name has mutated into a general SF club), who said Marla had shown them around once before, dropped by that night, and they agreed with Ralph about the Mars landing — they think the Russians will do it by then. (I don't; the Russians will just keep sending robot craft, i.e. Progress, Lunokhod — there are reports of a "Marschod" planned for the mid-80's, but the Soviets just don't have the booster development capability for a Mars manned mission so ^(1990's) soon).

What do I think will happen?? Well, the Russians will take a lead until they are permanently removed as a factor in this century by the collapse of their bloc. Ted Kennedy will be elected President in 1984 and will cut space to the bone in his second year, only keeping up international projects. When a pro-space movement, visible for some years but plagued by a Trekkie image for most of them, finally takes over in the 1990's there will be ^{permanent} oil shortages and great civil unrest, and only by keeping a tenacious "human needs" party at bay while technology develops will Man's Dream of Worlds Unseen be fulfilled in the early-mid 21st century.

Back to the matter of (if you'll excuse the expression) Ralph: I fear that the powers that be are trying to tell me this club is not for me — I am just settling into an uneasy truce with the rest of you when he joins. Ah, the ignominy of eviction at the hands of a mere &!@%#! Trekkie...

bad charter. I don't even mind removing Marla from office, (as head Librarian), in fact it might be a good idea to place Louis in that position. Consider:

He is a person interested in the forum, who's energies have been wasted until now. He is a potential shift-holder, and has shown some interest in maintaining the library. He is a better candidate than me, because I refuse to hold an office, (at least for now) (I also refuse to accept an appointment to a subsidiary position, Louis).

Needless to say, this is all dependent^{SP} on Marla. I don't think anyone would want to throw her out of office, she would have to resign voluntarily, so she has veto power over Louis's special election.

(Incidentally, knowing Louis, the power's of the head Librarian would have to be clearly outlined, but at least he's willing to do the work.)

I don't know if this is legit or not, but I would like to vote in absentia (or whatever) FOR Louis's charter, and FOR^(him in) any special election that might be held. I also support Greg's motion to amend make an amendment to the financial section of the charter.

And, if this is possible, I vote for ~~the one man~~ against the one-man - one office rule, but for the holding of a special election, should Marla decide to resign from the Librarian post.

I also vote in favor of allowing people to vote in absentia, though this might result in ^{bureaucratic} problems.

I would make a motion to vote on this issue, but that would be contradictory.

For their power they had made unholy bargains with the gods, the lords of slang, who waged an eternal war against the lords of grammar. But now the power of the bright empire was fading. Some blamed it, secretly of course, on Louis who was so obnoxious that even his own people could not stand him - and they were among the most obnoxious alive. Others whispered that Louis had incurred disfavor among the lords of slang. It was well known that he had a proclivity towards grammar.

Even more secretly some whispered that it would be better to have Louis's cousin Raccoon on the throne. Raccoon was a true believer in tradition, he was almost totally ungrammatical, ^{CONTRADICTION IN TERMS}

His clap signaled the start of the ancient obnoxious tradition of the grand punoff.

Louis winced as each obnoxious rattled off his pun. Finally ~~to~~ it was Raccoon's turn. He told a particularly terrible one ~~that~~ and Louis could stand it no longer. "Stop", he yelled. "That was bad usage."

Louis had uttered the war cry of the "'Course your majesty, just I thought I heard ya say 'bad usage.' I jes guess

Louis winced as Rackoon spoke, but could say nothing. Rackoon went back to the obnoxious and continued his pun.
But his agony was relieved by the coming of Limmerick, Rackoon's cousin.
Limmerick, who was fair of face, gold of hair, blue of eyes, and fat of figure. Louis loved Limmerick for her diction was perfect, and her grammar faultless.

"To tell you of your destiny."

"What is it?"

"You, Louis, have lived in all ~~ages~~ ^{places} and in all times that man has existed on Earth. And always you have been my soldier, fighting for fate in the eternal wars between grammar and slang. Always you lose that which you love most, Always even at your moments of victory, do you lose."

"Then why do I fight for you?"

"Because Louis, you are a putz the Eternal putz."

"No!" screamed Louis.

"Yes, it is your destiny. Just as it is your destiny to bear that which I carry with me. It has been called by many names - some, not too nice - some call it the Black Pencil, but most call it Grammarbringer."

As the apparition named the pencil, it appeared. An enormous black pencil, over five feet long, with runes inscribed on it.

It floated over to Louis' hand, and he grasped it. Power surged through him and suddenly the pencil with a life of its own pulled Louis to the papers he had been signing and circled the errors on them writing the war to those concerned - There has been too much space. This log involved with Louis granted many of the comments are justified. We do have more important things to talk about. For my part I will talk of current news and perhaps outline my story some more. First quarining let's be very careful about allocations we don't want to allocate more money than we have (we are close). Next I have been to party and have been told to show up in the scoop office on Thursday to see if we have a check (I have it there) Third, I am planning to see Don Demore (CSRS - Society of physics students) to see what our next moves for the space colony conference. I am also attempting to make a pitch for the Parv in a science fiction class.

Now for my story - The form will be unusual it won't be as any per-use but will be the translation to English of a best seller on Tellevis III designed to separate fact from myth about ingestion. It will be a historical reamining of the various attitudes towards ingestion of societies over the ages.
 It will start with primitive attitudes. By the way this is Mithras progressed in much the same way as western society)
 It was accepted with a naturalness on human form but there were taboos and misconceptions concerning ingestion which have "no basis in fact" small cities arose with the One God way and strong faith since the provides the basis of their civilization so that is the development followed ingestion was to various degrees at various times subject to severe taboos and a trend towards regarding ingestion as an evil to be tolerated only for its beneficial effect on health (this race doesn't have to ~~be~~ ingest to survive but it does help in keeping ones health) and on the whole a negative attitude. This was increased by the Conjunction and the gluttony of its leading citizens. The conversion happened and both the Religion and the temporal power were changed. The conjunction didn't survive the change the ~~path~~ "the new name of the religion" did. It vacillated but continued to lay down heavy taboos against ingestion despite the gluttony of some of its leaders. When the secularization and the commercialization happened these barriers gave away somewhat but during the industrialization the taboos were back in force which brings to the present where the struggle is at present going on to give up the old prejudices and adopt a more sensible attitude toward ingestion.

There is some one waiting for me so I shall fill in more of the art line at a later time so I close good night all

Louis- I thought you said you would buy the next Logbook.

← I RESCINDED THAT PROMISE IN MY ENTRY
OF 1/30.

I think I've got another idea for cable-from-space power generation:

You manufacture metal rings in space, magnetize them, and slide them down the cable.
Their motion produces a current, and this also ~~sup~~ gives us a supply of iron!

There should be some way of harnessing the power of the rings at impact too...

(If any one can see anything wrong with this, please let me know, I have an exam on this kind of thing in a few weeks.)

3/21/79 To Joe From Ralph:

On the more serious side of solar power generation you'd be surprised at some of the design proposals being considered.

- ① The classic concept is to place a few square miles of solar cells in synchronous orbit & convert the energy gathered into microwaves. These waves are much more efficient at penetrating the atmosphere than light is. Also the waves can be concentrated so the receiving antenna can be reduced in size. It will still be large enough in order to keep the intensity of beam down to tolerable levels for anything passing through it. Otherwise a super-concentrated beam could make a ~~great~~ great death ray. I imagine Roasting your enemy to well done in a few seconds from thousands of miles away. There are however already federal regulations limiting microwave beam intensities.

(2) Another solar power system involves a simple reflecting surface which concentrates its beam of reflected light to a solar cell array on earth. This method does have an advantage since a large reflector would be a lot simpler & cheaper to build & build in orbit.

(3) Still another method uses a large reflector to ~~power~~ ~~heat~~ concentrate light & heat up a reservoir of liquid helium the helium would spin a turbine system which ~~would~~ attached to a generator would produce electricity which ~~would~~ be converted to microwaves. ^{to be beamed to an earth receiver,} The last 2 methods are the most solid in terms of existing technology. (3)

all of these systems have inherent energy losses (1) Loses energy in both photoelectric conversion & conversion into microwaves (2) Loses a lot of energy in the atmosphere (3) Loses some energy in the helium engine & generation & microwave conversion

If I read through my old tech journals I'm sure I can find a couple more variations if I do I'll log them. I plan on doing a series on planned shuttle activities including large space structure & communication satellites

Donna

Hello, all.

Will - I like "Battlestar Galactica" better (Ellison-creation). After being away from it for a while, I got to see last Sunday's episode. I still fail to see television's insistence upon pseudo-profound nudecity rather than interesting, quality, thought-provoking programming. Sales can't be everything. If it were, we wouldn't have PBS and some of the BBC imports. No one makes money on really good stuff. Sigh.

Why am I so put off by Lutz's and Ralph's writing so as to be unwilling to even make an attempt at their entries?

Sort of depressed today. That's all.

→ three analyses of Louis:

harry he's fucked up and didn't have a choice in the matter - disrespect and revulsion and: 500 B. he's fucked up and had a choice - you

② How about we wrap the moon in ~~copper~~ copper wire & mount fusion rockets at the equator. We then cleverly position magnets around it & spin it up w/ fusion motors & get energy from electromagnetic current. I leave the details of transmission, generation, and spinning-up as an exercise for the alert reader.

Wild enough. . . .

③ or more simply, suppose we use the fusion motors to impact the moon upon an enormous pusher plate on the earth which we have cleverly attached to turbines which produce electricity. Right. . . .

I quit. . . . (For now)

Will 3/21/79! TO JOE: There are several problems with your suggestion

1) can the iron survive the heat of ~~entry~~?

a) Heat does affect permanent magnets the magnets may become unmagnetized in heat (this may be solved by magnetizing the cable instead of the rings)

3) Remember, that energy isn't free, it comes from the fact that there is a force opposing the motion of the rings, this force increases with velocity. Couple this with air resistance and the terminal velocity will be very low.

All in all your device would be rather inefficient. More energy would go to melting the rings than supplying current.

Greg - you really should try to humanize your story. I imagine - men watching natives dress of every meal, trying to figure out what affects them... Young naked native surprised in mid-die of berry patch by opposite-sex Earthling and the misinterpretation of the blush... Make it more than an allegory! Please! I am aware that you do not share my conviction that the most mature attitude toward sex is apathy, but there are a number of ways an ingestion-taboo human society could develop. Use them!

There is a passage in ~~Knight's~~ ~~Sax~~ in which John ~~Nixen~~ extolls the virtues of the word fuck. It has an etymology pointing to origins in words for "hit" and "beat" in half-a-dozen different languages. He doesn't say this, but he must have ~~discovered it and called it a virtue.~~ Today Phyllis Schlafly is having a victory dinner. Placey on her.

Donna - you expect to get a job teaching tykes English and don't care about spelling?
Let's hold the line at P.S. 53, no more glassy eyes, no more So long.

To all:

Who would like to go on a trip to the Smithsonian in Washington D.C. for a weekend? If we carpool + crash on the floor of my friend's apartment in Maryland it can be real cheap to go. There is a nice subway system, the metro, that can take us anywhere we want to go in the area. We can brown-bag lunch, grab sleeping bags, eat 3-4 meals out (cheaply), and have fun. Please comment!

* Important message to all shift holders:

if for any reason you cannot make it to your library shift for a night, or have to leave early or be late, Please contact me in advance. I will fill in for you, or try to find another person to fill in for you. I would really like to keep our hours constant, being that I've come here several times between the hours of 6 and 11 P.M. on Mon. thru Thurs. and the library was closed.

Please speak to me about it, call @ 4-4253 and leave a message, send a good-year-blimp over Hand College with your message, announce it on M.M.S.B., or put

It on my Bible (my Organic Chemistry textbook), etc. in other words, let me know if you cannot make

 Marla - I've been to the Air & Space Museum it's great. I went last October, and an exhibit called Exploring The Planets was not yet ready though it had been supposed to open in the summer - I guess it is now. I understand that their theater finally gotten a feature to replace To Fly. The screen effect is so beggling that people who get airsick should not go in. Unfortunately the Specarium was not open when I was there.

Joe - Before I forget, since a new Charter is being passed (is it? It is, isn't it?) new elections for all posts must be held, I agree that it is common courtesy to approve the incumbents by voice vote, but as the right to hold another office is transferred from Coordinator/President to Vice President, a new Librarian must be chosen - I think I can do the job, and am glad you agree. Donna may want to step aside as Secretary, since the new charter would extend her term past her graduation and transfers the minutes back to the log book - but that's her decision.

 All - Who is going to Luncheon? How? On what terms would they take me with them? (locked in the trunk, dragged from the exhaust pipe sitting on the roof, etc.)

Joe - 3/19/74

In the last couple of days Marla has actually been acting like a Librarian - while I was out collecting overdue books, she was writing overdue notices (A less productive endeavor, but she wasn't didn't know what to do so I suggested it) the library is a mess Is there a War of The Librarians in progress?? This place is looking good considering that one of Greg's dungeon groups has lived here for two days... wise up Alex, you can't pick my pocket, I'm the DM... No, I will not unstone Bruce. I am thinking of writing a ~~story~~ series of stories of two generations hence, when the world is dominated by one nation: that nation, taught self-sufficiency early on, unparalleled in industrial development, that nation, fierce of spirit, that nation, of some beauty, of teeming trade, of well-earned pride, that nation, is the

you ask?)

Ma/19 - The trip to the aerospace museum sounds perfect, I want to be counted in. May I suggest Easter weekend, (directly before classes resume)? The weekend before the spring break is ok by me too, and may be more convenient for some. To whatever extent the library closings on Monday were my fault, I apologise. I'll take my shift schedule more seriously in the future. A Louis - thanks for posting the shift schedule outside the door. I never was very clear on exactly what my shift hours were. Incidentally, I find it interesting that in the logbook you say you're the co-defacto librarian, but on the schedule you say you're the entire defacto library administrator. And don't think Ma/19 still deserves some of the librarian credit? While she has not done alot recently, she has done some shift in the past (for instance! the shiftist, some shift in the past).

the checkout instructions, plans for library furniture (Hammock), and she attempted to move the books for sale & to a different location, But a certain individual, against her authority, moved them back). Must an officer put in a certain number of hours a week to defend themselves from usurpers? It is up to Marla whether a special election should be held for librarians.

And, incidently, I didn't notice anything in your charter requiring ~~an~~ special elections for all offices. The more I think about it, the more sure I am that this new charter shouldn't be put into effect untill our next regular elections are held.

Will - Alright, so how about if the rings burn, ~~the~~ high up on the cable, ^{then} we just send up two cables next to each other, and use the rings to heat the upper ends. Then we would have a gigantic thermocouple.

Incidently: What you people don't seem to understand is that Mars just doesn't seem to be of much economic worth to anyone right now. If we go there before 2000, I will be very surprised if it's more than a slight exploratory mission, perhaps even no more than a stunt.

Louis - In your entry of 1/30/82 your reason given is that you will be writing Mostly in the SFLS logbook. You have not.

Why don't you buy us a ~~new~~ logbook? (Thanks for helping me with the cataloging)

Lots of funny things recently. Joe is here now. Now that doesn't sound funny but the reason he is here is: He was going to take the 8:35 train home. Will kept telling him to leave because he would miss his train. Joe gave a full lecture on how would he was to catching trains. Well at around 8:30 he left, fully confident that he would catch his train. Well at about 8:50 Joe walked back into the form.

(well it was funny at the time. You had to be there)

I was approached today by a girl who occasionally uses the SFL library and had an overdue book. She said some strange person went to her room to get the book back. I asked her if he had red hair. She said yes and were a strange suit. (Louis strikes again) She was afraid that he might come back with a knife or something. Later in the day I was in the Lecture Center asking to take a picture of the Mud Can blackboard. The lady I was talking to said that some strange person was in earlier asking for the same thing. I asked her if he had red hair. She said yes and were a strange suit (Louis strikes again!!) They all thought he was insane.

MY HAIR IS NOT RED!
I'VE BEEN INSURED ENOUGH!

With regard to the brochure on "Dr. Who" that's floating around. Harlan Ellison seems to be getting more extremist with age. For him there seems to be no middle ground. He either really likes something or hates it. His endorsement of "Dr. Who" seems to go quite too far in praising it. Well Ellison always struck me as being more emotionalist than rationalist anyway.
